Don't Dress For Dinner

In a stylish converted farmhouse. Bernard is hoping to entertain his chic, Parisian mistress, Suzy, for the weekend. He has arranged for a cordon bleu cook to furnish the gourmet delights, is in the process of packing his wife Jacqueline, off to her mother, and has even invited along his best friend Robert as a suitable alibi.

It's foolproof, what could possibly go wrong...?

ACT I

The main living-room of a country house some distance from Paris. Early evening

ACT II

The same. Two hours later.
